DIVISION OF PROFESSIONAL STUDIES RADIOLOGIC TECHNOLOGY

The Radiologic Technologist works within the healthcare environment to provide diagnostic images for treatment and diagnosis. The imaging professional is responsible for accurately positioning patients and ensuring that a quality diagnostic image is produced. Each Radiologic Technologist is responsible for radiation safety, radiation protection and basic patient care. Clinical experience in Boston area hospitals combined with coursework prepares graduates for positions in this high demand field.

RADIOLOGIC TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM MISSION STATEMENT

The Radiologic Technology Program prepares students for evidence-based practice in a rapidly changing, diverse health care environment supported by quality clinical facilities and a strong core curriculum in general education.

Eliot Kim

Eliot Kim was born in Aurora, Colorado, son of 2 loving parents who immigrated from South Korean in 1984. Eliot enlisted into the U.S. Army in 2009 and received his education at the US Army Health and Science Academy. He received his Radiology X-ray Certification through the U.S. Army in 2005 and currently still serving the U.S. Army Reserve.

In August of 2007, Eliot applied for the Clinical Instructor at Boston Medical Center and was not qualified to take the position. He then enrolled at Roxbury Community College in February of 2008 and graduated in May of 2010 with an Associate's Degree in Radiology Science. He became the Clinical Instructor at Boston Medical Center in April of 2011.

Eliot Kim has worked at Boston Medical Center for the last 9 years, became the Supervisor in October of 2009 and took on Clinical Instructor as a second title in 2011. Eliot has published the Retained Surgical Instrumentation Reference Guide and has been copy written in 2013 for Boston Medical Center.

Eliot has great pride in educating people in pursuit of a better life or to secure a better financial future. He devotes his personal time to tutor any student that is willing to take the opportunity. His motivation is driven by his students and co-worker.
